LA Art Show 2020

The end of February ushers in a celebration of art across the city. From the highly anticipated Freize Los Angeles to independent art fairs and more, here is what to do during Los Angeles Art Week.

Felix Art Fair

Turning the Santa Monica Airport into an expansive contemporary art celebration, Frieze Los Angeles 2025 will take place from Feb. 20 to 23. The multi-day art fair will bring together more than 95 international and local galleries. Among the wide range of solo and curated stands, there will be many honoring the spirit of L.A. and highlighting our city's artists. In particular, English gallery Victoria Miro will have a space for galleries participating in the fair to come together and raise funds for fire relief efforts by donating works to be sold in aid of the LA Arts Community Fire Relief Fund. Other programming highlights include Focus, a section curated by Essence Harden that will feature 12 emerging galleries; "Only in Darkness," a city-wide project by Coco Fusco that explores race, gender and colonialism; the Black Trustee Alliance x Frieze Los Angeles - Land Memories initiative, which showcases the legacy of Atladen's Black community and Art Production Fund's public program, which invites Angelenos to visit works placed throughout the park for free. From Feb. 19 to 23, the LA Art Show will take over the Los Angeles Convention Center's South Hall to present the country's most comprehensive international contemporary art show. Spanning sculptures, illustrations, paintings and more, featured exhibitions include the metalwork of Steel Che (Youngkwan Choi) presented by Art in Dongsan, The Nature of Art presented by Coral Gallery and "She, Unbroken" presented by Snisarenko Gallery. The LA Art Show will commence with an opening night premiere gala in benefit of the American Heart Assoc. Hosted by actress and producer Jenna Dewan, the evening will include access to an early look at the LA Art Show, bites, beverages, the VIP lounge, and unlimited admission on regular show days.
